Le premier roman de Paul Auster en sept ans. Une architecture narrative inédite. Une expérience de lecture inoubliable.

Un roman-kaléidoscope où un personnage, Ferguson, incarne toutes les figures du destin protéiforme que le monde et l'Amérique des années 1950 furent susceptibles de proposer à l'individu, de l'enfance à l'entrée dans l'âge adulte. Tout en restant fidèle aux obsessions littéraires qui sont les siennes, Paul Auster, avec cet ambitieux et ample nouveau roman, renouvelle et détourne brillamment le genre du roman initiatique en le confrontant à l'Histoire du XXe siècle.
