Une histoire globale des interactions entre l'homme et la nature à travers les grands cataclysmes climatiques qui ont bouleversé la vie de l'humanité, de la collision des continents il y a trois millions d'années au réchauffement climatique qui nous menace aujourd'hui. Comment l'homme, qui a toujours subi de grands stress environnementaux, s'est toujours efforcé de transformer la nature pour mieux la domestiquer et comment, en retour, la nature n'a cessé de se venger, entraînant l'effondrement de maintes civilisations et obligeant l'homme à toujours s'adapter à de nouvelles conditions de vie. Par un journaliste en sciences humaines spécialiste de l'histoire globale et mondiale (www.histoire-mondiale.com).
