Paris, décembre 1897, Edmond Rostand n'a pas encore trente ans mais déjà deux enfants et beaucoup d'angoisses. Après l'échec de La princesse lointaine, avec Sarah Bernhardt, ruiné, endetté, Edmond tente de convaincre le grand acteur en vogue, Constant Coquelin de jouer dans sa future pièce, une comédie héroïque, en vers. Seul souci : elle n'est pas encore écrite. Faisant fi des caprices des actrices, des exigences de ses producteurs corses, de la jalousie de sa femme, des histoires de coeur de son meilleur ami et du manque d'enthousiasme de l'ensemble de son entourage, Edmond se met à écrire cette pièce à laquelle personne ne croit mais qui deviendra la pièce préférée des français, la plus jouée du répertoire jusqu'à ce jour.
