This volume offers a collection of Metropolitan John Zizioulas' articles which present his trinitarian doctrine of God, as well as his theological account of the Church as the place in which freedom and communion are actualized. The title, based on St. Paul's "receive ye one another, even as Christ also received you" (Romans 15:7), suggests an idea of dialogue between the divided Churches, which are called to receive from one another and indeed to receive one another. This raises all sorts of fundamental questions which are not only theological but also ecclesiological, since the highest point of unity in this context is that of mutual ecclesial recognition and not only agreement on doctrine.

His Excellency the Most Reverend John (Zizioulas) is a modern Orthodox theologian and Metropolitan of Pergamon, in the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople.

"One of the most original and most profound theologians of our time."

—Fr. Yves Congar

"John Zizioulas is one of the most profound young theologians I've ever met."

—Fr. Justin Popovich (in 1975)

"John Zizioulas is actually dealing with the most contemporary, the most urgent, the most existential issues facing the Orthodox Church today."

—Fr. John Meyendorff

"Metropolitan John Zizioulas is generally recognized as the most brilliant and creative theologian in the Orthodox Church today. The publication of a new book from his pen is a major event."

—Bishop Kallistos of Diokleia

"He's a real theologian."

—Rev. Prof. Henry Chadwick
